COMMENT OF THE DAY

Canal Decision

THE decision of the British government, and other major users of the Suez Canal, to permit their ships to use the Canal, for all practical purposes brings to an end a dispute which started ten months ago with Egypt's nationalisation of the Suez Canal Company and climaxed by the Anglo-French military operation against Port Said and the northern area of the waterway. The decision also tacitly implies that Egypt has won recognition of her right to sovereignty over and administration of the Canal.

It was made plain last week, when the Suez Canal Users' Association failed to agree to a continued boycott of the canal, that most of the countries in Europe chiefly affected by the dispute, would decide to resume the canal route. The French government at the moment is holding to its ban on using the waterway, but it is unlikely it can continue to deprive French shipping owners of their discretionary rights. The realities of the new situation can be expected to force the French government into revocation of existing orders.

PUBLIC reaction to Mr Macmillan's House of Commons statement is bound to vary. But the rank and file will probably be more inclined to applaud than to castigate. An indefinite boycott of the canal appeared to offer little or no chance of forcing President Nasser into a more tractable state of mind; indeed the Egyptian leader holds such a strong hand, the highest card of which is actual possession of the canal, that only a few diehards have clung to the conviction that he could be made to bow to the demands of the major users of the waterway.

It is true eight Conservative MPs have "revolted"; have described the government's decision to allow British ships to use the canal as capitulation and appeasement. Nevertheless the "revolt" is unlikely to win a wide measure of public approval; nor is the government expected to be unduly embarrassed by the defection of a few of its members. Opposition criticism in the House yesterday was lukewarm. Generally speaking the government's decision appeared to be regarded as sensible in the light of events.

MR Macmillan's answer to those who complain that the British government has wholly surrendered its position over the future of the canal is that the decision to resume use of the waterway does not imply agreement with the Egyptian memorandum on the subject recently deposited with the United Nations.

In fact, however, the Egyptian proposals, though not fully conforming to the six principles laid down by the United Nations for a settlement of the dispute, are not wholly unacceptable. The main point of controversy is around the question of insulating control of the canal from national politics and policies.

What now remains to be seen is whether President Nasser, with the canal once again being fully utilised by international shipping, will display any willingness to negotiate an agreement providing guarantees against exploitation of the canal as a weapon of national policies. On this issue the Egyptian leader has to face world opinion. It is conceded that Egypt possesses certain rights regarding future operations of the canal, but she cannot be allowed to endow herself with the power to employ discrimination against shipping or to possess a position where she can hold the canal in pawn as a domestic waterway.

Protest Against Government's Suez Decision

London, May 13.

Eight members quit the British Conservative Parliamentary Party tonight in protest against the Government's announcement earlier in the day that British ships could again use the Suez Canal.

Mr Harold Macmillan, the Prime Minister, had told an almost silent House of Commons that payment of Canal dues by British ships would be made to Egypt in sterling through a special account at the Bank of England.

(one of the rebels)

MPs' Statement: CAPITULATION TO NASSER

THE joint statement issued by the revolting MPs said: "The Government have announced their capitulation to Nasser."

"This is our final episode in a long series of retreats that started with the Labour Government's weakness at the time of Abadan."

"Throughout the most recent series of retreats we have tried to persuade the Government to stand firm."

"We have urged it to stick to the six principles adopted by the UN Security Council on October 13, 1956, and accepted by Nasser."

"Appeasement leads only to disaster."

"By refusing the Canal to Israeli shipping, Nasser has already broken his latest pledge to abide by the 1958 Convention and reversed his acceptance of the six principles."

"It is folly to nurture his pride just when it has been shaken by his failure to swallow his words."

"We believe that the British people, not only in these islands, are desperately anxious that Britain should take a lead."

"Even though all the alternatives are unpleasant, their final surrender to Nasser will be interpreted by the people of Britain and by the friends of Britain overseas as a sign both of material weakness and, far worse, of a decaying will."

"If this betrayal be accomplished how can we have the surrender of Cyprus?"

"We should be untrue to our deepest political convictions if we did not now make the only protest left and refuse the party Whip."

"We remain Conservatives. We shall continue to support all fair Conservative measures."

"Our purpose is the revival of Conservative leadership with the will and capacity to restore the interests and honour of Britain and secure the return of a real Tory administration when the general election comes." —Reuter.

NAVAL TASK FORCE DEFENCE

London, May 13. THE self-contained task forces which would form the future British Navy, would be deployed in the most advantageous way around the world, but concentrate at any given point should the need arise, Mr Christopher Soames, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, said today. He told the House of Commons this in asking for £316 million to cover the cost of the Navy until March 3, 1958.

The task forces would each consist of a carrier armed with nuclear-age planes and weapons, a cruiser, destroyers and frigates. Mr Soames said there were many territories where British military power would be welcomed in time of trouble, but which did not wish to have permanent static forces billeted upon them. Declaring that it would be a great mistake to underrate the value of destroyers and frigates in peace time, Mr Soames said considerable areas of seas were openly made safe for British shipping by the presence of such ships.

PIRACY IN EAST

There was still a good deal of piracy in Eastern waters. "Our vessels based on Hongkong have a good deal of work to do in that respect," he said.

Mr Soames said Russia had "the biggest submarine fleet in the world has ever known and her construction programme is still in full swing."

He believed that by 1960 Russia would be able to deploy continuously some 150 submarines in the Atlantic alone. She already had 500 submarines in commission, considerably more than half long-range.

More than two-thirds of them had been constructed since the war.

Britain's defence plans in global war rested on a system of alliance, he said.—China Mail Special.

Duke Of Gloucester Tipped For Merdeka Day

London, May 13. The Duke of Gloucester was being freely predicted among informed quarters here today as the chosen representative of Queen Elizabeth to attend the Malaya independence ceremony on August 31 this year.

There was no official confirmation of these forecasts, which, however, were not officially discouraged.

Malayan quarters said the choice of Gloucester would cause some disappointment in Malaya.

It was hoped, they said, that Queen Elizabeth's sister, Princess Margaret, would go to Malaya for Merdeka Day.

This hope received no encouragement from officials who also ruled out the possibility that the Duchess of Kent or Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, might attend the Independence day ceremony.—United Press.

The truck overturned and then caught fire and exploded, killing and injuring passers-by.—France-Presse.

ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TRADE TALKS WILL OPEN SOON

Cairo, May 13. AN Egyptian Finance Ministry spokesman said today in a statement following Britain's announcement on Suez Canal that: "It is expected that Anglo-Egyptian trade talks will take place very soon." The Finance Ministry spokesman announced that talks had been concluded between the delegates of Britain, Egypt, and Switzerland, regarding the regulation of tolls and payments of British ships using the Canal.

The talks have resulted in the British Government lifting or from today all restrictions imposed on sterling transactions between Egypt and Britain in connection with the new sterling account.

The British Government has promised it will not infringe Egypt's freedom to use this

GERMAN A-ARMS DECISION SAVED LONDON TALKS

Hamburg, May 13.

Dr Konrad Adenauer, the West German Chancellor, told the Congress of the Christian Democratic Party today that his government would have destroyed the chances of success of the London disarmament conference if it had announced a decision not to arm the Bundeswehr with atomic weapons.

FAURE FOR HONGKONG

Most Hopeful

The Chancellor said the disarmament negotiations now going on in London were most hopeful of any held so far.

"Why are they hopeful?" he asked. "Because the whole military power in the world—the whole military potential together, not atomic arms—in which the United States is undoubtedly stronger, is divided, as far as can be judged, just about equally between the three great powers."

"The moment we decided the Bundeswehr would not have atomic weapons, the scale would have tipped in favour of the Soviet Union. We would not merely have lessened the chances of the dismantlement negotiations, we would have destroyed them."

The Chancellor was speaking on the second day of the Congress which marks the opening of the Christian Democrats' campaign for the September 15 general elections.—Reuter.

CLOUDBURST SHATTERS TEXAS TOWN

Lampasas, Texas, May 13.

Soldiers were brought in tonight to help clear the debris from 60 to 70 square blocks that a 10-foot wall of water ravished last night.

The bodies of four drowned persons were recovered. Two other persons were missing. Eight were injured. State Police Captain E. K. Browning said damage could easily total $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. Official estimates put damage at five million.

The full picture of the disaster emerged hours after the flood when Sulphur Creek, which makes an elbow through Lampasas, started using the town itself for a course in the middle of a cloudburst. It literally swept away houses.

Residents sat tonight in the streets, against telephone poles and on the highway. One home was dropped into the middle of US Highway 281, the main road to San Antonio. The roadway station, which is 120 feet long, was lifted, turned about and dropped.

The Red Cross took 400 homes were destroyed or damaged. The Red Cross fed 600 persons tonight in a shelter set up in the First Baptist Church. Other residents moved in with friends or relatives who live in a section of Lampasas which has a population of 7,700—that is in the hills.—United Press.

Boat Detained

Stockholm, May 13. A Swedish fishing boat, with a crew of two, has been seized by the Soviet authorities and its master was detained for unlawful fishing in Soviet waters outside Königsberg, the Swedish Foreign Office announced here today.—Reuter.

MISSING PLANE FOUND

Vancouver, May 13. Wreckage from a Trans-Canada Airlines North Star Aircraft missing since Dec. 9 with 62 persons aboard was found in the mountain 60 miles from here, an Airline spokesman said today.

No bodies were found.

Search for the plane had been postponed during the winter because of heavy snows and low-hanging clouds over the mountains where the plane disappeared while on a flight from Vancouver to Winnipeg.

A spokesman said the wreckage was found yesterday by a group of mountain climbers.

The plane ran into a snowstorm over the mountains and the pilot requested permission to return. Shortly afterwards, the plane slipped from radar screens and vanished in Canada's worst air disaster.—United Press.

Israel To Test Nasser

Jerusalem, Israel, May 13. Israel is likely to send a test ship through the Suez Canal in the near future and will regard any interference with it as an act of war, an Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman said tonight.

Asked what Israel would do in the event of such interference, she said he did not think her reaction would be to complain to the International Court at The Hague.

He said Israel had hitherto delayed such a move in a desire not to prejudice the liberations of the Suez Canal Users Association in London.

"Now Israel feels freer to make the test," the spokesman added.

He disclosed that talks were being conducted in Paris with the French Government regarding Israel's intention to send an Israeli merchant vessel flying the Israeli flag through the Canal.

Asked whether a definite date had been set for the test the spokesman refused to comment except to say "it is not likely within the next week."

The spokesman said the Government of Israel regards the sending of an Israeli ship through the Canal as important for two reasons:

★ 1. The use of Suez was of major importance to Israel's economy.

★ 2. There was no other possible test of President Nasser's intentions or of Egypt's adherence to international obligations.—Reuter.

CRIPPLED PLANE LANDS SAFELY

New York, May 13. A Pan American World Airways plane en route from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to New York with 104 persons aboard landed safely at Bermuda after losing power in one engine. In flight, the Coast Guard announced.

A Coast Guard plane sent out to Bermuda met the crippled airliner and escorted it to a landing.

The plane sent a signal stating that it was in no immediate danger but had been forced to feather one propeller because of engine trouble.

It jettisoned fuel over Bermuda before landing, the Coast Guard reported.—United Press.

Japanese Appeal On Nevada Tests Rejected

Washington, May 13. The United States today rejected a Japanese appeal that forthcoming nuclear tests in Nevada be postponed.

In a note delivered to the Japanese Embassy here today, the United States said that in the absence of adequate inspections for control and reduction of arms the United States has a responsibility to the entire free world to strengthen its defensive and deterrent capabilities.

It is for that purpose of deterring aggression and preserving the peace, therefore, that the government of the United States feels that it must, under present circumstances, conduct nuclear tests," the note said.

The United States placed full blame on Russia for obstructing "progress toward control of the nuclear threat and the ending of nuclear weapons tests,"

IN SYMPATHY

The American note replied to a note of April 29 in which Japan asked the United States to consider the possibility of postponing a series of nuclear tests in Nevada. American officials said then that the United States probably would reject the Japanese request.

United States said today that it is in sympathy with Japan's desire that nuclear energy be limited exclusively to peaceful purposes and that all nuclear weapons tests be suspended. The United States said it has been working toward these goals since 1940.

The American note assured Japan that the Nevada tests starting on Thursday will be conducted under "extreme safety measures." It said the tests will not "result in any significant addition to radiation levels throughout the world" and added that the tests "will be of low-yield fission devices."

Until the time comes when tests can be halted, the note said, the United States would be willing to co-operate with other countries in a system of registering nuclear tests with United Nations. Japan, Canada and Norway recently issued such a proposal.

The note said, the United States "hopeful" that agreement can be reached on limited international observation of nuclear tests.

'IS HOPEFUL'

The note continued that the United States already has invited observers from a number of countries to attend the Nevada tests.

But the United States said:

"In the absence of adequately inspected agreements for the control and reduction of armaments, the government of the United States has a responsibility to its people—as well as to the rest of the world—to strengthen its defensive and deterrent capabilities and thereby contribute to the maintenance of peace." The note said history has repeatedly shown that one-sided weakness leads to war.

In proceeding with the Nevada tests, the note said, "the government of the United

It Was A Kiss Of Love,' Says Sorrowing Star

Milan, May 13. Film star Linda Christian emerged from her secluded hotel bedroom today to express indignation at reports that she gave crack racing motorist Marquis Alfonso de Portago a "kiss of death."

"Some newspaper said that at the Rome check-point I gave Alfonso the kiss of death," she murmured through a black hood draped over her face.

"This gives me great pain. I loved him, and my kiss was meant as a good luck kiss because it was a kiss of love."

She had also given him a note in Spanish showing the positions of various drivers. "Iador-Montia I had written 'te quiero mucho' (I love you a lot).

Miss Christian, who learned of de Portago's death in the Mille Miglia Race when she arrived at Milan Airport last night, said the Marquis would not listen to her pleadings.

Not Quitting

"When he showed me his love, I asked him to give up racing. He replied: 'Not even for the greatest love in the world could I give it up. I shall not quit it until I win the World Championship.'

His career came to a tragic end yesterday when his car crashed, killing 11 spectators, five of them children, and his co-driver Eddy Nelson, an American.

Miss Christian went on: "I met him in Paris. I have known him only for the past six months."

"We were very much in love with each other. We planned to get married as soon as he had obtained a divorce."

Miss Christian, who wore mourning black, revealed that she had cancelled all her film engagements so as to follow the Marquis in all his races.

Monte Carlo

"We had already booked train tickets for Monte Carlo. Here they are. He was to have taken part in the Grand Prix in Monte Carlo."

Miss Christian burst into tears when the news of de Portago's death was given to her last night.

Immediately she drove to the crash scene near Mantua.

Dr Giordano Lupetina, a friend of the film actress, said she wept silently all the way and broke down completely when she saw the car wreckage and the pools of blood.

She took off Portago's crash helmet and gently stroked it for several minutes. She wanted to keep it, but was told that the judicial authorities needed it for their investigations.

Fainted

Despite attempts to dissuade her, Miss Christian set out for the mortuary to see the body. She fainted and collapsed on the floor.

Returning to her Milan hotel room early today, she gave orders not to be disturbed.

"Now I don't know what to do," Miss Christian said.

I am completely confused and alone. I feel as though no one were left to me.

I have no working engagements—nothing. I don't know where to go or what to do. I am only waiting to know what they will do with the body.

BRITISH DEFENCE FORCES

LEAGUE ACCUSED OF 'HUMBUG OF MOST OBSCENE KIND'

London, May 13. Lord Altringham accused the Victoria League for Empire Friendship today of "humbug of the most obscene and squalid kind" regarding coloured Commonwealth students in new arrangements at its club in West London.

Lord Altringham, 32-year-old Etonian and editor of a conservative monthly review, resigned from two league committees last March because he alleged a colour bar was being operated at the club in Leicester Square, West London.

In a statement issued today he declared that the league had taken up "new surprisingly defensible position and he caused his council to resign.

"Last Friday evening Admiral Sir Cecil Harcourt, Chairman of the Victoria League, visited the Club and announced to its inmates that in September or thereabouts the Club would become multi-racial—but for women only."

EXCLUDED

"Hitherto it has been for both sexes, but coloured students have been excluded."

"This change cannot be welcomed—indeed it must be strongly condemned—because it indicates no change of heart in the Central Council."

"On the contrary it is based upon the same odious and fantastic theory that inspired the previous policy of discrimination—the theory that men and women who are discriminated only by the colour of their skins cannot be trusted to sleep under the same roof, unless they are herded into separate wings."

SUGGESTION

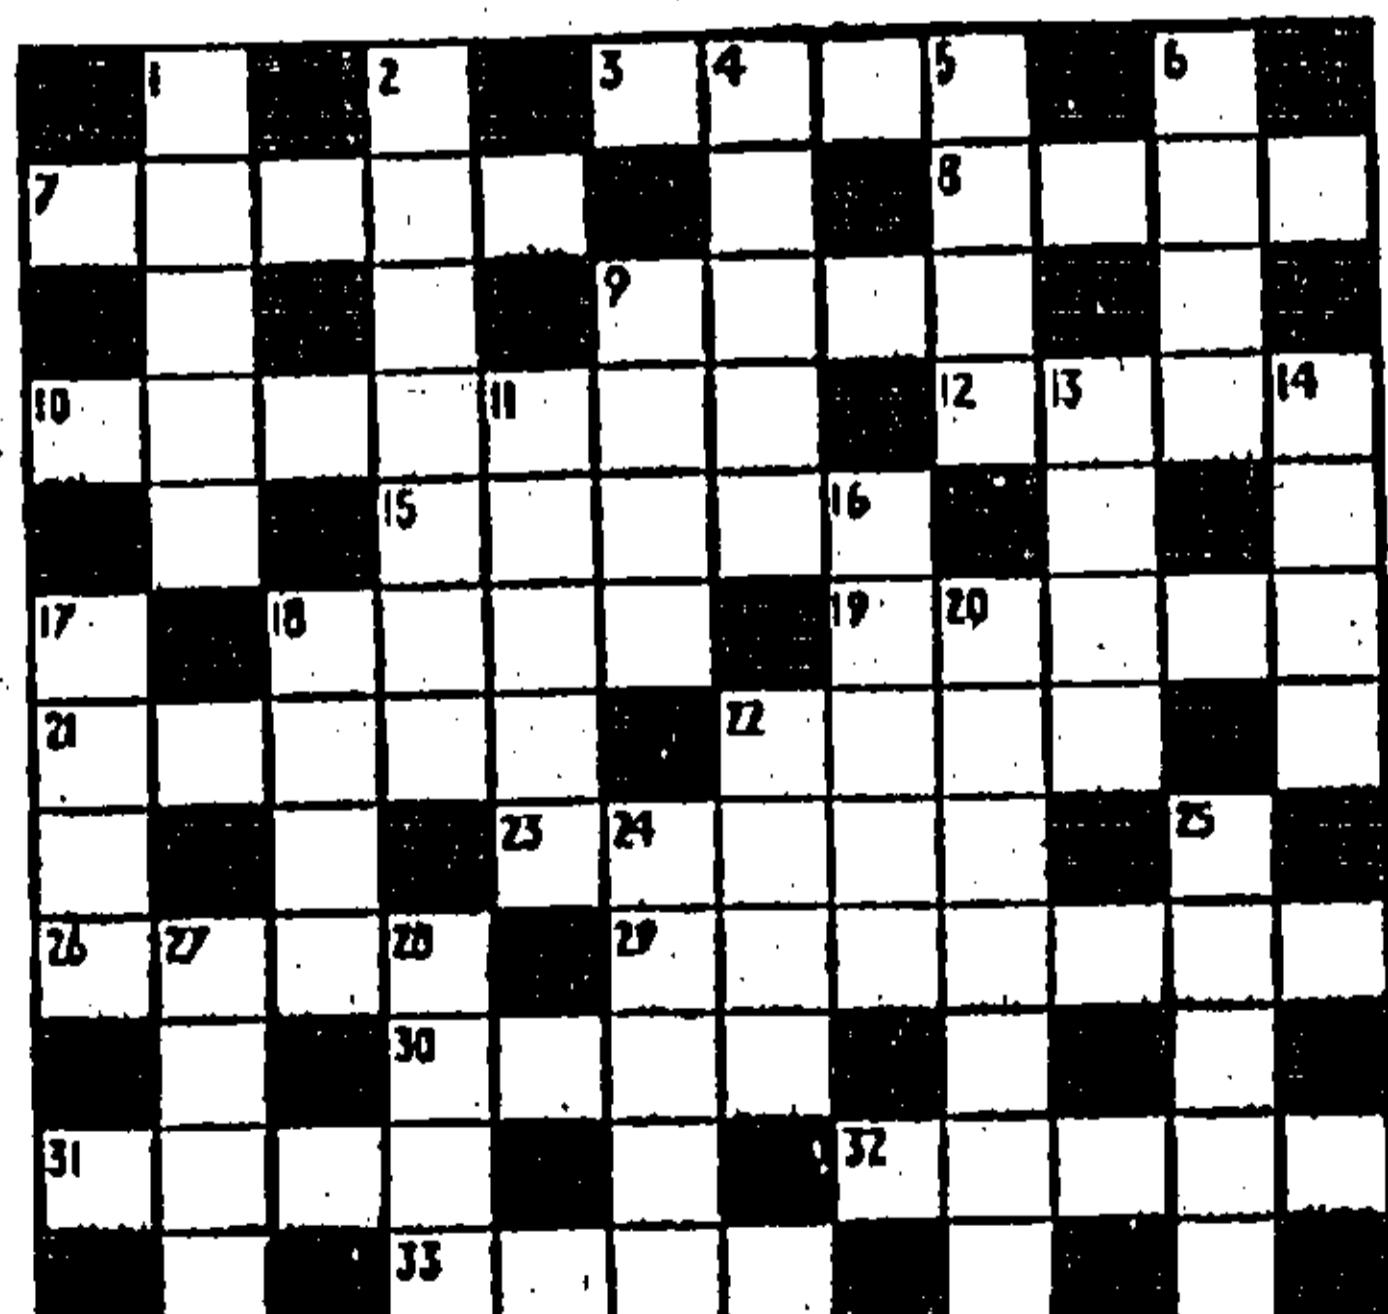

"Since the Leicester Square premises have been thought suitable for white students of both sexes, any such precautions being taken, the suggestion is that coloured students are more promiscuous and less controlled in their habits than

JAPAN TO STEER INDEPENDENT COURSE IN UN

New York, May 13. Mr Koto Matsudaira, Japan's new permanent representative at the United Nations, presented his credentials today to the Secretary-General, Mr Dag Hammarskjold accompanied by Mr Hideo Kitahara, who has been Charge d'Affaires since Mr Toshikazu Kase, Mr Matsudaira's predecessor, returned to Tokyo.

At an informal press conference after the credentials ceremony, Mr Matsudaira said his delegation's task in the United Nations would be to exercise a moral and moderating influence when "dangerous tensions" appeared.

In this way, Japan could make its biggest contribution to the world organisation—which she joined last December—he said.

ASPIRATIONS

Mr Matsudaira indicated that Japan would steer an independent course from the powerful Afro-Asian group when its interests so required.

He noted that Japan was geographically in the group and had "certain common interests" with the other members. Also, it understood to some extent "their desires and aspirations."

Questioned about his plans for the delegation, Mr Matsudaira said he hoped to bring in new staff to bring it up to the strength required for an important power.

He would go to Tokyo next month for consultations on this and other questions.

On the question of Japan's efforts to halt nuclear tests, Mr Matsudaira said consideration was being given to the possibility of introducing a resolution on the issue at the next General Assembly, due to convene on September 17.

He declined to express an opinion on Communist China's admission to the United Nations, but he said that Communism still remained "a serious threat" to Asia.—Reuter.

COMMUNIST CHINA MAKING STRONG BID IN FISH MARKET

Singapore, May 13. Communist China is making a strong bid to cut Indonesia and the Federation of Malaya from the Singapore fish market, according to trade circles here.

Official statistics show that China has trebled her fish exports to this colony since 1950.

The trade circles said that the China fish was "popular" because the predominantly Chinese population of Singapore takes to Chinese food.

was mainly bolt fish, yellow croaker and large browns. Consignments were brought in by large fishing vessels and steamers.

The China fish was also far cheaper and varied in taste compared to fish from other countries to meet the consumers' requirements, the circles added.

A Singapore Commerce Ministry official disclosed that from January to March this year 711 tons of fish worth $141,700 were imported from China into Singapore.

The total imports of fish from China in 1956 was 1,159 tons against 392 tons in the previous year.

Hayashi Says 'Absolutely First Class'

By CHUJO WATANABE

London, May 13.

Lieut-General Keizo Hayashi, Chairman of the Japanese Defence Forces Joint Staff Council said today that the British defence forces were absolutely first rate both in the quality of arms and the high degree of the training of the troops.

General Hayashi summed up the impression of his visit to this country to inspect military installations at a press conference in London this evening.

He said he was greatly impressed by the members of the British defence forces with whom he came in contact. Although they were very modest in their attitudes they displayed strong conviction and firmness which was a quality he thought the members of the Japanese defence forces should try to develop.

Discussions

He said he had discussed the new defence white-papers with British leaders and he was impressed by the fact that although Britain put a great deal of store in its traditions, she was ready to make big changes in her defence policy with great conviction when the necessity arose.

General Hayashi said he had seen many of the latest arms this country had produced including guided missiles. There was no plan in the immediate future for Japan to buy any of these. The Japanese defence force was trying to reach the status of self-sufficiency in arms production and everything he had seen on this trip would be useful in making plans for the future.

Attitude

General Hayashi is leaving England on May 16 and will visit France, West Germany, Switzerland and Italy on the way home. He said he was interested in studying the attitude of these countries towards Nato.

He said that although Japan's position was different from Nato countries such as Japan had a constitution preventing her from sending troops overseas, in the present-day world, no one nation was capable of defending herself alone and it was usual for Japan to study how she could co-operate with other nations in defence matters.

Lastly, General Hayashi said that although Japan and England had been at war he did not even once experience any unpleasantness and everybody had been extremely courteous and friendly to him.—Reuter.

FINANCIER SEES NASSER

Cairo, May 13. Financier Ahmed Mohamed Abbud, known in Cairo as "Egyptian Rockefeller," will leave shortly for the United States to attend a meeting of the Cabinet called to settle details of how the Government intends to raise 150,000 million francs in new taxation to supplement 250,000 million francs in economies in the 1957 budget already agreed among his ministers.

M. Abbud, who with 16 months of office behind him has survived longer than any other administration since the liberation, enters the fray with the backing of the overwhelming majority of his Socialist Party.

This backing was expressed in a resolution of the Socialist National Council in favour of the Government's policy of "pacification and reform" in Algeria.

Before the National Assembly (Lower House) reassembles today, M. Abbud is due to preside over a meeting of the Cabinet called to settle details of how the Government intends to raise 150,000 million francs in new taxation to supplement 250,000 million francs in economies in the 1957 budget already agreed among his ministers.

M. Abbud aims to secure assembly approval for his "austerity" measures in the fastest possible time, and in any case before President Nasser leaves for an official visit to the United States at the end of the month.—China Mail Special.

ANTI-TEST PLAN BY COUNCIL

New Delhi, May 13. "A concrete plan of action" to mobilise public opinion against nuclear weapons tests would be drawn up at an All-India National Convention for Peace to be held at Bangalore on May 24, Mr. V. Parameswaran, secretary of the All-India Peace Council which has organised the Convention told reporters at Bangalore today.

He said the plan would also aim at strengthening the hands of the Indian Government in its efforts to bring about an agreement among nuclear powers for stopping nuclear test explosions.

The conference would be inaugurated by India's elder statesman Mr. C. Rajagopalachari and attended among others by two ministers of the Commonwealth Government of India, Law Minister V. R. Krishna Iyer and Education Minister Joseph Mundkur.

Mr. Parameswaran said the Convention would prepare the ground for effective methods of bringing pressure on the nuclear powers to stop test explosions.

BY THE WAY.

by Beachcomber

THE moment has evidently come for me to publish this. It is happening to him. That theme of despair, and is crammed with violence, equal degradation, stark horror, wild poetry, and turgid symbolism.

It is called "Never Go Up," because there is a balloon on the stage all through the play, and it never goes up. The only other thing on the stage throughout the three acts is a large dog-kennel, to which the balloon is tethered. This subtle symbolism suggests the monotony and hopelessness of life.

The characters are a deaf beggar, who is disguised as a dog, in order to be treated kindly, a retired lighthouse-keeper, a sentimental laundress, a murderer, and a peevish mechanic.

"Never Go Up"

THE play opens with a drunken brawl between the beggar and the lighthouse-keeper, who live in the kennel. They fall asleep while cursing each other, and the deaf beggar, entering silently, kicks them out, cursing the moon and the stars in blank verse. The mechanic, who is blindfolded, is led to the kennel by the laundress, who tries to strangle him, but the beggar knocks her down. The two drunkards wake, and a fight for the kennel breaks out; the mechanic complaining that he cannot see and divided by 3½?

For a wet Thursday

10, 20, 3, 9, 47, 6, 4. Can you arrange these numbers in two, backwards? So that the total, when added up, comes to exactly three-fifths of the same numbers arranged in threes and divided by 3½?

YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

TUESDAY, MAY 14

BORN today, you are one of those lively, hearty individuals: who appear to float triumphantly through life with the greatest of ease. You men are cheerful joiners, "good fellows" wherever you go and seem to make friends with everyone. You have a magnetic personality, charm and impetuous emotions and are beloved by those with whom you work. You are known to "blow your top," however, if things do not go as you direct them. But, fortunately, once your steam is blown off, you cool down almost at once and are more affable than ever.

You women are especially fond of dancing and parties. You will probably shine socially and become the leader of your group. You would make a fine wife for some ambitious man—you know all the techniques of making friends and holding them. Fortunately these same people are apt to gain by their association with you, so the score is evened.

Both you men and women have excellent taste when it

WEDNESDAY, MAY 15

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—Promote yourself and your business today for the stars indicate you will have spectacular success at this time.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—Organise your job so that you can complete some old business and be prepared to go on to something new if you wish.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)—There is an electric excitement in this day and some of your most important projects should materialise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)—Get the rest that is needed to meet and challenge to your stamina. A positive attitude also helps.

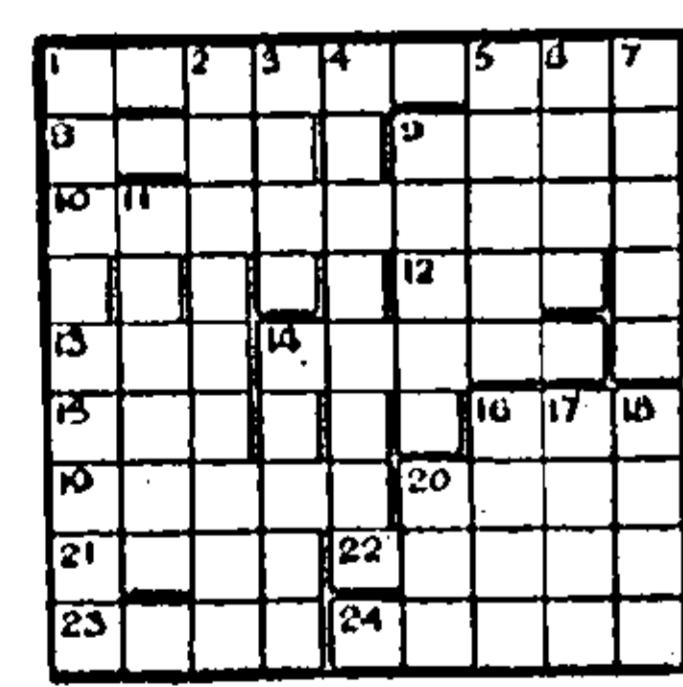

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20)—Your present traits will be of considerable help just now. If people like you, they'll want to follow your lead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—An elder person can be helpful to you just now. Accept graciously, you may be in need of more wisdom.

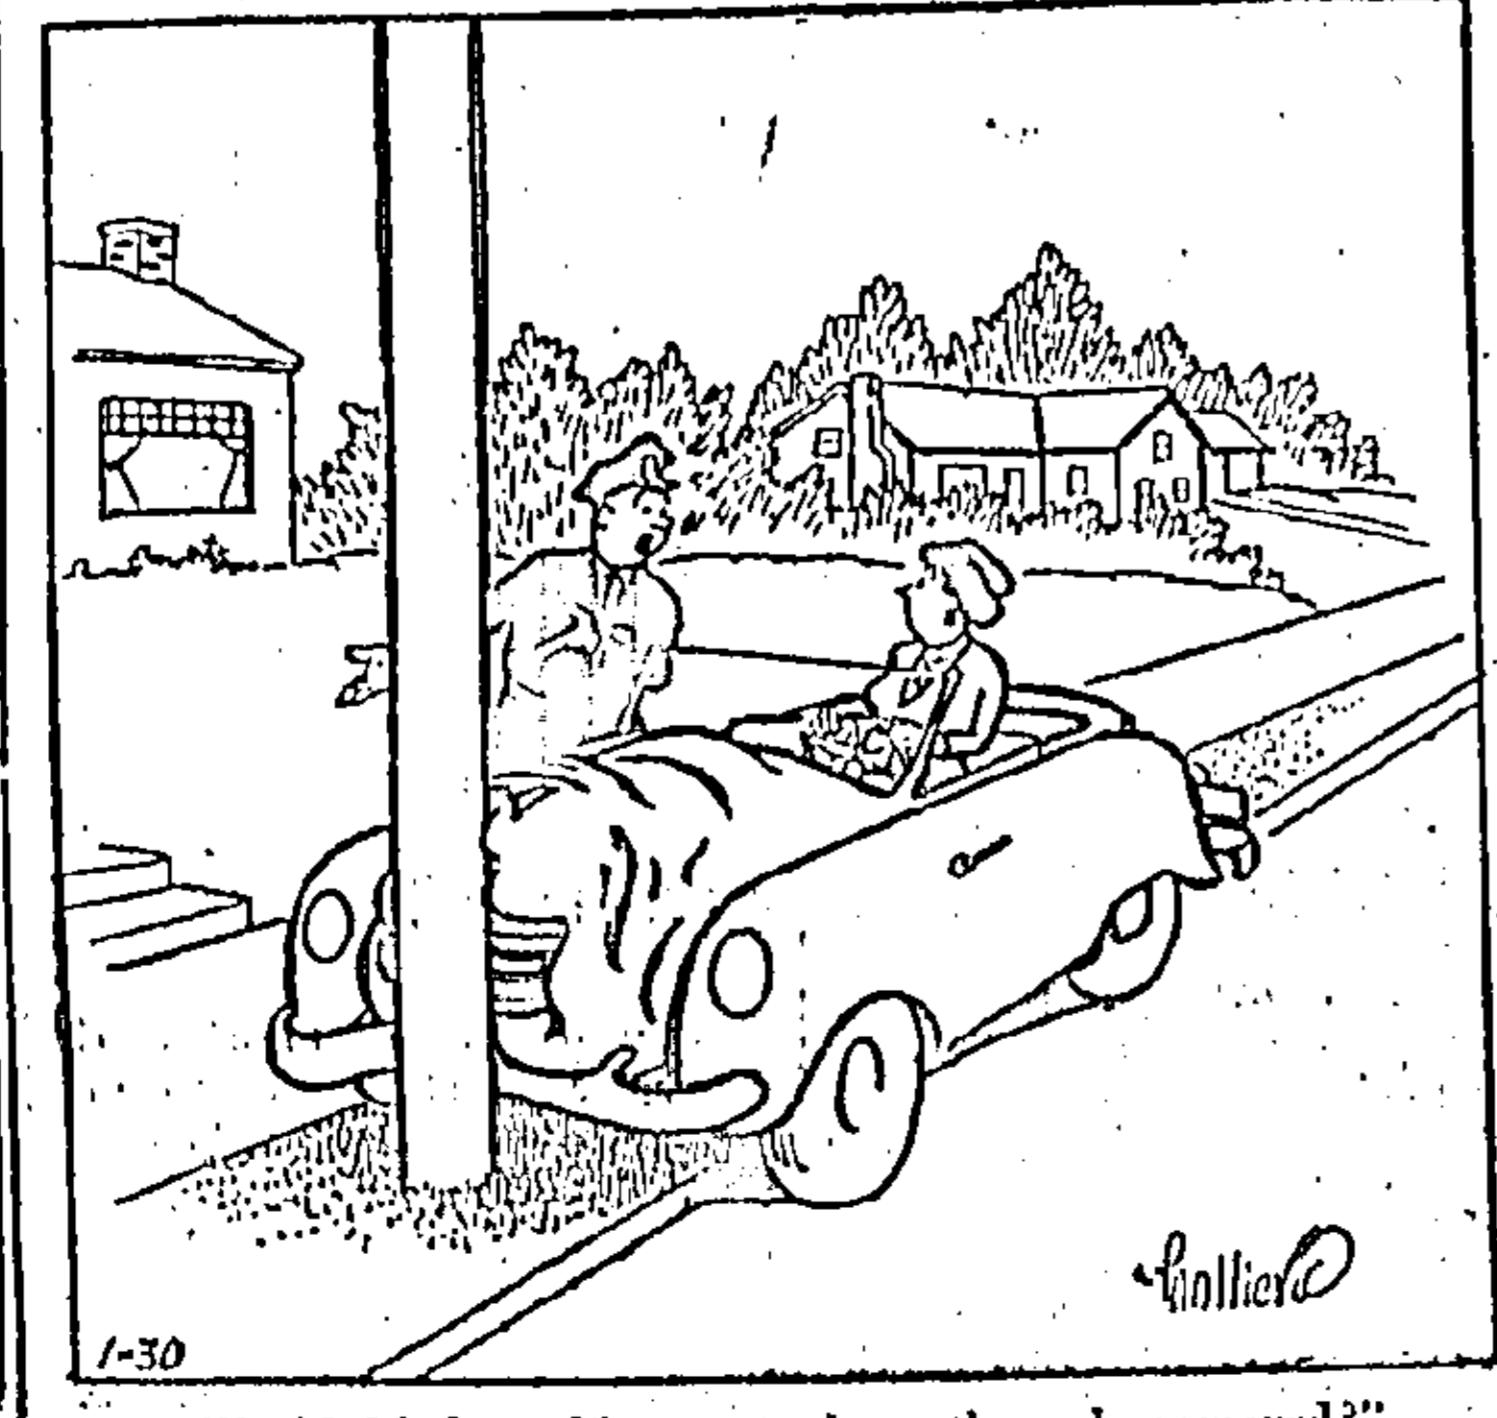

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—Solve your present situation and weigh aspects against liabilities for the best answers to all of your problems.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19)—Action on a matter which has been pending for some time should bring the anticipated excellent results.

Spade Uppercut Sets Contract

By OSWALD JACOBY

TODAY'S hand is No. 4 from the Intercollegiate championships. It is a two-way par. North-South must get to four spades and East-West must defeat the contract. If North-South fail to bid four spades then East and West get an automatic par since they have no chance to operate. There is no difficulty in the bidding. North chooses the two clubs respect because he wants to show both his strength and where most of it is. When South rebids to two hearts, North jumps to four spades and South takes a look at his two diamonds and passes quickly.

If West opens his singleton club, declarer plays the ace from dummy, cashes the ace of hearts, draws trumps, discards dummy's diamonds on his hearts and concedes a trick to the king of clubs.

However, a club lead is not indicated. West should open his king of diamonds. East must overtake with the ace and return the suit. West will win the queen and play another diamond.

Now it is up to East to make the killing play. He must ruff with the lack of trumps.

This play is known as the "uppercut." If declarer over-ruffs with one of his high trumps then West will make his ten-spot. If declarer discards then East and West have three tricks in and East will still make his king of clubs.

Among those born on this date were: Gabriel D. Fahrenheit, physicist; Alan Dale, dramatic critic; Sir Hall Caine and James Negley Farson, authors; Timothy Dwight, educator; Frank Gilmore, actor-producer, and Billie Dove actress.

Q—The bidding has been: North 1 ♠ East 1 ♦ South 1 ♣? West 1 ♣?

You, South, hold:

♦ A74 ♦ 95 ♦ A64 ♦ A4 Q9843

What do you do?

—Bid two hearts. You are very interested in a slam and this bid is the best way to start in that direction.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding is the same as in the question just answered. You, South, hold:

♦ A74 ♦ 95 ♦ A64 ♦ A4 Q9843

What do you do?

No matter what kind of meat you serve, make it look pretty as a picture with a gay garnish. Glazed apples or jellied cranberry cubes on orange slices are specially attractive when used for that purpose.

If you're planning a pork platter, have the backbone loosened from the ribs of a loin of pork at the market. Season meat with salt and pepper and place fat side up, in open roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer into centre of thickest part of meat, making sure that bulb does not rest on bone.

GENIUS IN THE NURSERY

What are the chances of your promising child becoming a prodigy? Read this interesting analysis on brilliant juvenile brains that confound the learned... and make your own deductions.

By EDWARD WESTBURY

THE publicity given to world tours of juvenile pianists, preachers, mathematicians and film "stars," who have achieved fame within few years of emerging from their prams, must prompt many a parent to ponder the possibilities of his, or her, promising child becoming a prodigy.

According to scientists and staticians, the chances are slender. Of every thousand children born, fifty are bright, twenty are brilliant, but only one is a prodigy. The rare all-round mental prodigies—a million-to-one chance—mostly burn themselves out in a few years and drop back to bright or even lower brackets.

LIGHT THAT FAILED

William Sidis, son of a famous American psychologist, could read and write at three. At seven, he entered school and qualified for a University entrance in six months. In his eighth year he mastered Latin, Greek, French, German and Italian and had a remarkable knowledge of botany and music.

At the age of eleven, the young Sidis entered the University of Harvard to study Pure Mathematics. A year later he lectured on the Fourth Dimension. He left the University loaded with honours, but within seven years he was content with a job as bookkeeper to an industrial firm, operating an adding machine. "This job helps me to seven-year-old son sat down and wrote a serious history of the universe. A year later he composed a treatise on Christianity designed to convert the heathen natives of Malabar!

Dean Swift could read any chapter of the Bible before he was three, whilst Lord Byron read all kinds of literature from the age of five.

John Stuart Mill, the great philosopher, learnt Greek at the age of three, Latin at five and in his eighth year began higher mathematics and history. Four years later he was coping with logic and philosophy.

CHILD OF WISE PARENTS

Carol Gallagher, of Ayrshire, is one of the outstanding child geniuses of the present day. When she was only five, intelligence tests showed that Carol's brain was superior to that of her own age attending the Convent School at Killdeer were struggling to master the alphabet. Carol, was reading Plato and the writings of Darwin. Her brilliant "photographic" memory was such that she could repeat, almost word for word, lengthy broadcast talks for schools.

In one psychological intelligence test she scored 181 points against an average of 145 by matured and highly trained minds.

From the outset, Carol's parents adopted a very wise policy. They decided that Carol should be brought up as any ordinary girl; they realised that even genius cannot flourish without family care and affection, peace of mind and a feeling of security.

These are the essentials of a firm foundation upon which prodigies such as Carol, can build their brilliant futures.

MANUAL MAGIC

Not all infant prodigies are masters of music, languages, or mathematics and other sciences. Some are brilliant in a more general way.

At the age of six, David Redford of Uckfield, Sussex, was a garage mechanic of no mean ability. He could change a complete set of car tyres with mallet and hammer and tap out screw threads; use a hacksaw and an electric drill with the skill of a seasoned mechanic as well as strip down a car engine and build it up again, check brakes and tap out dents in the wings!

David's genius first became apparent at the age of two when he found a spanner and removed a wheel from his pram. He has decided his own future—"I'm going to be an Inventor when I get big." If his genius does not burn itself out, he probably will.

Amazing, too, was the three-year-old son of professional light-fitter John Chilworth, of Croydon, Kent. When only six months old he could bend a six inch nail with his hands. At twenty months he flung a fourteen pound hammer across the room and before he was three years old he was able to lift a fifty-six pound hammer with ease. Shortly before his death—from pneumonia at the age of four—he would trundle four or five children around the garden in a wheelbarrow.

Had young Chilworth lived he would most probably have developed into the champion strong man of the world.

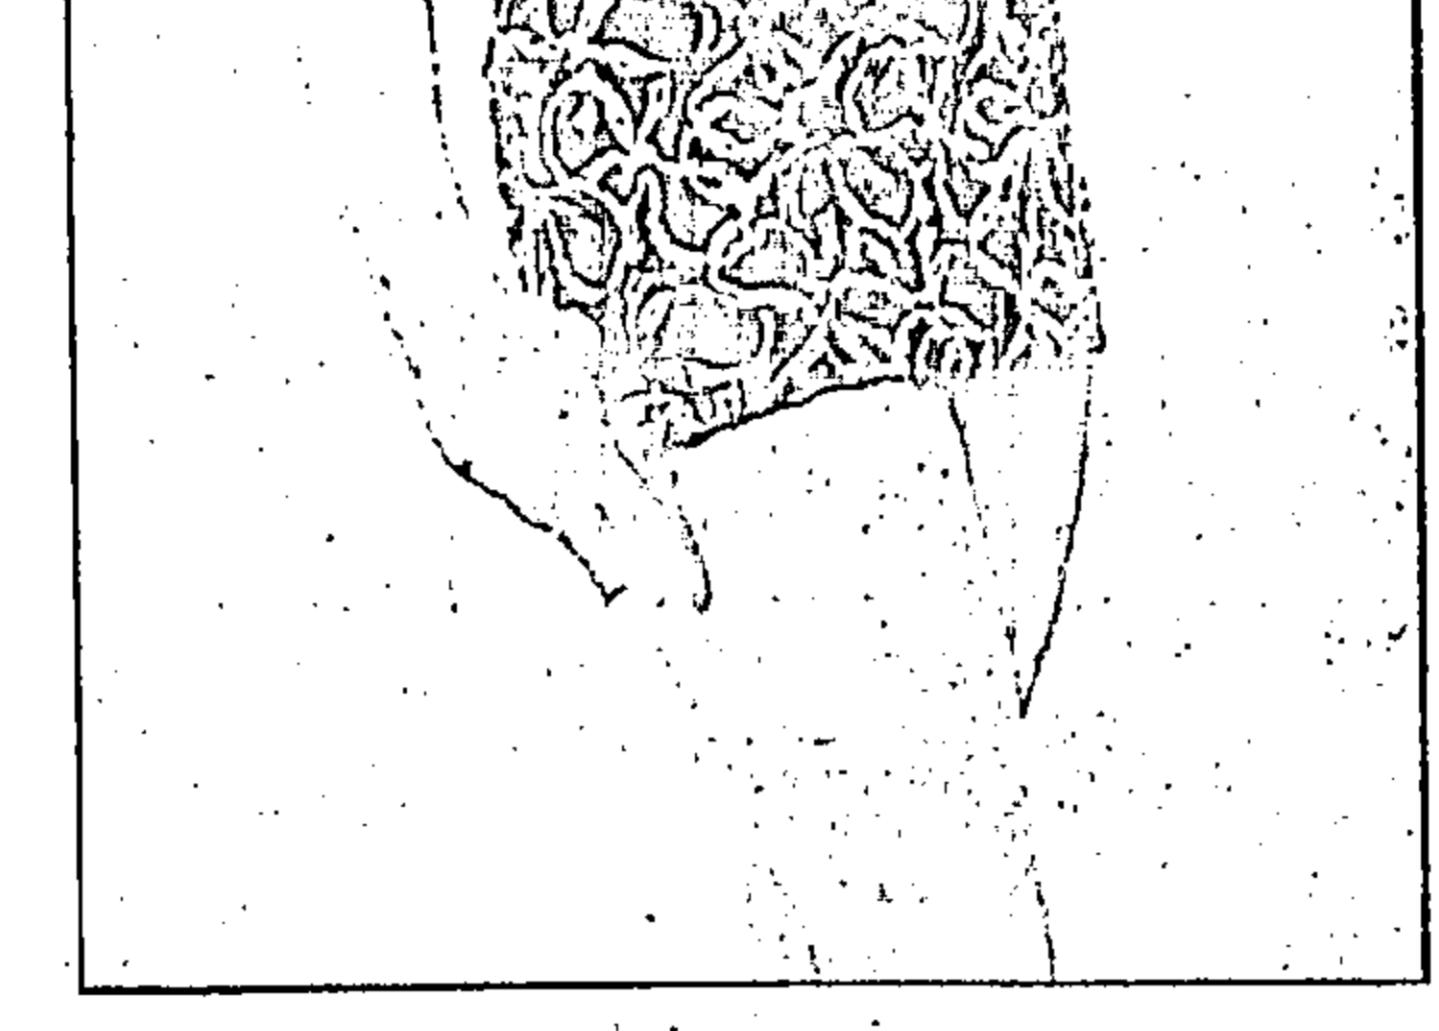

WHAT IS THE SECRET?

According to Dr. Fraser Roberts, of the Burden Mental Research Trust, Bristol, genius is usually the product of a small family. After analysing many thousands of children, Dr. Roberts found the dullest had six or more brothers and sisters whilst, on the average, the budding genius had only 1.6 brothers and sisters. It is possible, of course, that genius may come to any family because each parent contributes different hereditary factors. In combination, these factors may produce results wholly different from those which occur in the parents where they are manifested singly.

There, Blackie, these are all your cousins. They're all cats—big, wild, beautiful cats. Aren't you proud to belong to such a noble family?"

For a moment, Blackie looked up at Haniid with her great green eyes opened wide. But the next moment, she yawned, touched her legs together, curled herself up in a tighter knot and promptly went to sleep, purring loudly.

Meat Dishes Need Dressing Up

By ALICE DENHOFF

No matter what kind of meat you serve, make it look pretty as a picture with a gay garnish. Glazed apples or jellied cranberry cubes on orange slices are specially attractive when used for that purpose.

Dress up a pot roast to make it a bit different.

Shortly before the roast is done, make up a batch of your favourite fritter batter.

Remove pot roast from kettle.

Drop fritter batter by spoonfuls into drippings in kettle. Cook, turning to brown on all sides.

Remove fritters; make gravy.

Boil down to jam-like consistency, 5 lbs. tart apples, 3 lbs. brown sugar, 1 pt. cider vinegar, 2 cts. ground cloves, allspice and cinnamon.

Pour in sterilised jars and seal with paraffin.

For 8 servings of an unusual sausage and apple combination, brown 1 lb. pork sausage meat 10 min. over low heat. Pour off drippings.

Cook 6 large cooking apples and pare a ring of peel from top edge.

Core 6 large cooking apples and pare a ring of peel from top edge.

Stuff apple cavities with sausage. Place in a greased baking dish and sprinkle each apple with a tbsp. brown sugar. Add 1 c. water and bake, covered, at 350° F. 25 min. or until apples are tender.

Here is a good conserve that goes well with many meats, hot or cold.

Arrange pot roast on platter with fritters. Garnish with parsley and horseradish-stuffed prunes. A pretty picture!

If you're doing a boiled beef roast, try serving it with a garnish of baked pear halves filled with mustard pickles.

Here is a good conserve that goes well with many meats, hot or cold.

Blackie didn't seem to be much interested in the picture of the mouse, very likely she preferred a live mouse.

"And this," said Haniid, turning to the back of the book, "Picky Poo don't agree with me, and where all the cats live. They're all cousins of yours. I don't suppose you've seen many of them but I think you ought to of the jungle, you'd do more know what they look like than just glance at him. Or here's your Cousin Lion. He's the king of the jungle. Isn't he?"

Haniid said, "Well, I think he's handsome,"

Haniid said, "even if you and I do think you should be a little more attentive. If either of you know what they look like than just glance at him. Or here's your Cousin Lion. He's the king of the jungle. Isn't he?"

Haniid added to herself, thinking perhaps that Blackie and Picky had both probably take one quick glance and run.

Haniid turned to the next page.

Here there was a picture of a tiger about to leap from a tree,

THE NEW SEASON AND...

CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE—IT WILL BE SURREY AND YORKSHIRE AGAIN

Says BRUCE DOOLAND

I would like to be able to suggest a real dark horse for the County Championship this year—Nottingham or Leicestershire or Hampshire, for instance—but in all honesty I can't.

As I see the line-up the two best runners must be Surrey, who have held it five consecutive times now, and Yorkshire. I expect some lively cricket from Middlesex, who now have quite a few good youngsters coming on, and if things would just "click" for the talent they have, some strong challenging cricket from Northamptonshire.

With the addition of my old Aussie pal, Bill Alley, to their ranks, I expect lowly Somerset to provide quite a few surprises, too. Already you will have noted Colin McCool has got his eye in. That 50 in 11 minutes in the friendly match against Hampshire recently must have been tremendous stuff.

Nobody could have been wasting time there. They got four overs in for him to do it so I reckon nobody could demand brighter cricket than that.

The obvious point about it is, of course, that it did not need any course, or anything to produce that spite of hitting. Colin just used his strong arms, his keen eye, and let fly.

Which makes me think, that if more of us took courage and chanced our arm more often we would have enough success to keep the game on its feet without slide-rule stimulants.

RARE LEADER
But let's get back to the Championship. Obviously one must choose Surrey to set the pace. They still have tremendous all-round bowling power. But I have an idea they are going to miss the personality and driving power of skipper Stuart Surridge, especially when Peter May is away on Test duty.

If you analyse the batting strength on which Surrey has won through all these years, it has been pretty thin, and I believe it was held together by the spirit and fight the indomitable Surridge put into it. It wasn't that he scored a lot of runs himself. But by sheer power of personality and extraordinary enthusiasm, he managed to get more than was ever expected from others. Quite certainly he never accepted defeat until the last wicket had gone or the last run scored.

Leaders of the Surridge type come all too rarely and I think Surrey will have to work wonders to retain their place top without him. Brian Sellers, the old Yorkshire skipper, was much of the Surridge type, but Yorkshire didn't do well when he dropped out.

In fact, I think it is only now that Yorkshire are coming back into the top rating again. They have blooded quite a lot of young players and if Billy Sutcliffe can now make them "click" as a full fighting unit I think they could beat Surrey to the Championship.

A great deal, of course, will depend on how heavily the sides are raided for the Test matches. If Truman gets back into the England side, for

COACHING HINT
At the beginning of the season few bowlers can command the length and control they achieve later in the season, especially spin bowlers. So my tip to all bowlers is to concentrate on one accurate type of delivery to be able to fall back on until you have had time to get into rhythm with the fonder stuff. It will pay dividends. WORLD OF SPORT

Tommy Lawton May Get Managership Of Notts County?

By DEREK JOHN

Some people are never satisfied. Frank Broome took over the acting management of Notts County in mid-season. The club were in a seemingly hopeless position, and almost certain to be relegated to the Third Division.

But under Broome's guidance, they steered clear of the danger zone, and escaped the drop.

So the directors slap Frank on the back, and appoint him permanent manager. Not likely! The directors won't tell Broome a thing. He doesn't know whether he will be asked to stay or not, despite his obvious popularity with the players, and more important, the results he has achieved.

Instead, the rumours are buzzing around Nottingham that former County and England centre forward Tommy Lawton, will get the job next season.

A split in the board on this question doesn't make it any happier for Broome.

Black marks to the County board. They deserve a load of trouble, if they sack Broome now. And they'll probably get it.

TENNIS STAR

Christine Truman, the 16-year-old star of British lawn tennis may give up the game. Or at least her mother says so. And all because of a dispute with the Lawn Tennis Association as to whether Sheila Armstrong, another pupil of the LTA's chief coach, George Worthington, was getting more practice and better facilities.

Because Miss Armstrong was given some coaching by Worthington and had a knock up with Mrs Mary Halford, the Wightman Cup captain, and international Pat Ward before her match against Miss Truman in the Bournemouth Hard Courts Championships, Christine's mother thought it favouritism and complained bitterly.

The whole business looked much different when Worthington explained: "If Christine wanted some practice she could have had it. She didn't ask."

WALKING CHAMPION

Vic Stone (Polytechnic Hawks), the English 100 miles walking champion, will compete in the Belgian International 100 kilometres road walk at Marche-en-Famenne, near Charleroi on May 11.

So Dai Dower has given in at last. Yet the British and Empire Flyweight Champion has relinquished those titles on the understanding that when he comes out of the Army he will be regarded as No. 1 challenger.

As from July and until the end of his Army service, Dower will box as often as possible as a bantamweight.

A courageous and sensible decision by Dower, that will be applauded by even his severest critics after that unfortunate affair in Buenos Aires against Pasquel Perez.

The "will he, won't he?" bother over John Charles' scheduled appearances for Wales in their World Cup games this summer, has been settled.

Charles, the Welsh giant who cashed in something like £10,000 when he moved to Italian club Juventus, has been given permission to play by his millionaire boss, providing Wales take out sufficient insurance coverage.

Wales have agreed to this condition, and the result is that Charles will play for Wales against Eastern Germany at Leipzig on May 19, against Czechoslovakia in Prague on May 26, and in the return game with Eastern Germany at Cardiff in September.

IN THE NEWS

From the fortunate to the less fortunate.... Two of Britain's unluckiest footballers are also in the news this week.

No. 1 is Bill Dickson, the former Irish international half back. Dickson, once an Arsenal stalwart, was released from his contract with the Gunners, after doctors told him: "You'll never play again."

Gallant Bill tried to make a come-back this season with Mansfield Town, the Third Division North club. But although the twice-dislocated shoulder, the cause of all his previous trouble, remained intact, he has been out of the game for the past three months with a slipped disc.

So Mansfield have reluctantly given him a free transfer.

Unlucky player No. 2, is Doncaster Rovers' brilliant boy star Alick Jeffrey. Remember Jeffrey, the lad who was tipped for a place in the full England team, until he fractured his right leg in the Under 23 international against France at Bristol 24 weeks ago.

Jeffrey has since had the TENTH plaster fixed on his leg. The geegaws won't make absolutely sure the leg is perfectly right. But that doesn't stop young Alick from being desperately disappointed.

"I was confident of getting rid of the plaster this time," he said on leaving the hospital.

But unlike veteran Dickson, Jeffrey is only 18. He has his whole future before him.

HOODED CLOAKS

The Ku Klux Klan which for generations has promoted its terrors in the light of burning crosses and under the anonymity of hooded cloaks has burst into the open by sponsoring a baseball team in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

The players recruited from other teams in the City League do not have to be Klan members. Most of them work in the local factory of the vast Du Pont Company but across their white T-shirts wear the red letters "K of K K" for Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Pamphlets distributed before the game explained that the team was organised to underscore the Klan's "recreation and its interest in civic good."

Usually the Klan pamphlets consist of "hate" literature directed against negroes, Catholics and Jews.

When the Klan applied to get into the League there was no opposition but it is understood the team which was beaten in its opening game 8-3 by a Du Point factory team may be expelled from the League.

A HUMAN PYRAMID?

Ever wondered what it feels like to be the base man in a human pyramid? Republic of Ireland goalkeeper Alan Kelly knows. He's on the bottom and England's inside left Johnny Haynes isn't feeling too happy, either. He's in the middle. Luckiest of the three is Ireland's left back Noel Cantrell. He's on top.

This was an incident in the World Cup game at the Empire Stadium, Wembley, London on May 8. To add to Kelly's woes, England won 5-1.—Reuter-photo.

'Little America' Down Under AUSTRALIA'S POPULATION RECEIVES BOOST FROM IMMIGRATION

By JAMES SHRIMPTON

Melbourne, May 13. With a powerful boost from immigration, Australia's population is rising rapidly towards the 10 million mark. In 25 years, the Department of Immigration predicts, 20 million people will live in this island continent, 32 times the size of the United Kingdom.

About 1,150,000 immigrants have landed in Australia since the World War II, roughly half of them from Britain and two-thirds of the remainder from Italy, the Netherlands, Poland, Germany and Greece.

Of the Britons, approximately half have travelled the 12,000 miles to Australia under a self-assisted-passenger scheme at a cost, to many, of less than a week's wages.

For £10 sterling, one-twelfth of the cheapest unassisted passage by sea, a Briton can start a new life in a country of higher pay, higher prices, greater opportunities and summer skies — with a dash of homesickness thrown in.

How he leaves his two-storey semi-detached British home for a white-painted weatherboard bungalow in Australia is explained by Australia's Immigration Minister, Mr Athol Townley.

Odds Favourite

Replies recently to a newspaper report that it is apparently harder for Billy Brown of Leeds to get here than it was for Giuseppe Giotto of Naples, Mr Townley said: "Billy is an odds favourite against Giuseppe in the immigration stakes, and Australia's money is on Billy."

Billy has three ways of emigrating to Australia, with the Australian people paying more than £100 sterling of his £120 sterling fare, and only about £10 sterling to pay himself. They are:

★ 1. He may be sponsored by anyone in Australia who can provide suitable accommodation for him;

★ 2. He may be sponsored by an employer who can offer suitable accommodation; and

★ 3. He can be nominated by the Commonwealth of Australia itself if his occupation is one of those listed by the Department of Labour and National Service for this purpose.

Billy could also, of course, pay his full fare himself, and emigrate to Australia at any time by sea or air.

Accommodation

Accommodation is a stumbling block for many otherwise "good-type, would-be immigrants" from Britain, Mr Townley said. "They want to come here and we want them, but there is no room for them in the British immigrant hostels."

To solve the problem, the Australian Government has launched a "bring-out-a-Briton" campaign. Local government bodies, community organisations, churches and public-minded citizens are to be canvassed to form committees who will find accommodation and employment vacancies and so help increase the proportion of Britons among the nation's immigration intake.

Meanwhile, Giuseppe Giotto, from Naples, finds it more difficult to get here. To obtain an assisted passage, he must be on the Department of Labour and National Service's list of tradesmen or workers in real demand. Australia then pays about £40 sterling towards his fare, leaving him, his government and the International Inter-governmental Committee for Europe on Migration to pay the rest.

Even if he is willing to pay his full fare, Giuseppe cannot immigrate to Australia unless he has been sponsored here by an Italian who has proved to the government that Giuseppe is a close, dependent relative. This restriction was imposed, when it appeared that the intake of southern Europeans "could get out of proportion in our balanced planned immigration programme."

Reception Centre

When Billy Brown of Leeds, his wife and two children land in Australia from a ship, they are taken to a reception centre and thence to the immigrants

SOUTH AFRICA TO OBSERVE US SATELLITES

Pretoria, May 13.

Observation of geophysical phenomena and of the behaviour of artificial satellites in orbit is to be the main contribution of the Union of South Africa to the International Geophysical Year, which will last from July 1957 to December 1958.

New techniques developed during the past 20 years, particularly for studying the ionosphere and the meteorology of the upper atmosphere have produced great advances in the various branches of this study.

But the only hope of better understanding of the complex inter-relationships between geophysical phenomena, especially those which are directly or indirectly due to the sun's activity, is by observing them simultaneously in many parts of the world.

One reason why the "year" is so long in fact for 18 months is to enable observations to be carried right through a period when the sun's activity will be at or near its maximum. In other words, at a time when sun spots (the outbursts on the sun known as solar flares) and other solar disturbances will be vatory in Johannesburg, the Satellite Observatory at Pretoria, the Astronomical Society of Southern Africa, the National Telecommunications Research Laboratory of the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, and the African Radio League of South Africa will all take part in observation, and in addition, teams of amateur astronomers using low power telescopes will watch the artificial satellite in the form of aluminium spheres 20 inches in diameter which will contain research instruments and small telemetering transmitters for relaying information back to earth to help scientists from nearly 40 nations in the most detailed examination ever undertaken of the physical forces affecting the earth.

The scientific effort will include studies of ocean currents, tidal forces, the earth's magnetic field, auroral activity, the radio reflecting layers in the upper atmosphere, cosmic radiation, micro-meteorites and other long-debated problems.

The scientific effort will include studies of ocean currents, tidal forces, the earth's magnetic field, auroral activity, the radio reflecting layers in the upper atmosphere, cosmic radiation, micro-meteorites and other long-debated problems.

Dr Karl Henize, of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in the United States, who has been given the responsibility of setting up and operating the various tracking centres throughout the world, said during a visit here recently that the technique of launching the satellite with high altitude, three-stage rockets has now been perfected.

The length of time that any one satellite can be expected to remain in its orbit, circling the earth at a speed of about 18,000 miles an hour, will depend on the height of its closest approach. The Royal Observatory at Cape Town, the Union Observatory

EUROPEAN FREE TRADE AREA

Participation Of Colonies Still Uncertain

From RONALD BOXALL

London, May 13. Members of Parliament are not very concerned it seems about the position of the colonial territories if Britain joins the proposed European Free Trade Area.

It was only just before the end of a wide-ranging six and a half hour colonial debate in the Commons last week that the matter was first mentioned—by Mr Arthur Creech Jones, a former Socialist Colonial Secretary.

Yet in the opening words of his reply to the debate, Mr Alan Lennox-Boyd, Secretary of State said the European Free Trade Area was "probably the most important matter that this Parliament will have to consider."

He pleaded lack of time for not dealing more fully with the subject. But he did say that the interests of the colonies were being closely watched in relation both to the European Common Market of six nations (now awaiting ratification) and the Free Trade Area, which it is proposed to associate with it.

Final Attitude

If Government are not saying much on the subject it does not mean they are not doing anything. Their final attitude will depend on the replies of the colonial governments who have been asked to give their views.

Meanwhile the Free Trade Area is the subject of frequent diplomatic exchanges between Britain and her European partners—and the question of the colonial territories' part in it is high on the agenda.

The matter will also be given a thorough airing at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' London Conference before a final decision is taken.

Last week European free trade was discussed in London between the British Government and top-ranking French Ministers, and again in Bonn between Prime Minister Mr Harold Macmillan and Dr Adenauer, the Federal German Chancellor.

But though the discussion to date has taken full account of interests of colonial territories the main issue is still whether, and in what form Britain itself will join the Free Trade Area. If for one reason or another the ultimate arrangements are unacceptable to Britain, the question of colonial participation automatically disappears.

Yielded Ground

However, this is extremely unlikely to happen. In fact Britain has taken the initiative in negotiations for a Free Trade Area in Europe and would be very loth to see the plan dropped.

To prevent this happening, Britain has already yielded some ground to its European neighbours. After the Bonn Conference, Mr Macmillan said that Britain had insisted that free trade in Europe should be limited to industrial goods—thus excluding the Commonwealth agricultural products which are the main beneficiaries of Imperial Preference. But this, the Prime Minister added, did not mean that a policy of "exceptions and arrangements" could not be made to meet the problems of individual countries.

This had been interpreted in some quarters as a hint that Britain is prepared to water down its previous insistence on the inviolability of Imperial Preference for the sake of seeing European free trade become a reality.

Britain's determination to see the scheme go through is also discernible in other results of recent diplomatic exchanges. The communiqué issued after Anglo-French talks said Britain has welcomed the signature of the Treaty of Rome, setting up the European Common Market, and the French Foreign Minister had stressed France's continued support of the plan for a European Free Trade Area to be associated with it.

Concern Expressed

This is significant because some concern had been expressed both in Britain and on the Continent at the

JOHN CLARKE'S CASEBOOK

MABEL IN SPRINGTIME

IN the spring an old lady's fancy turns, if she has spirit, to thoughts of something new to wear, or to have about her. So Mabel's fancy did.

She came into Central London to visit a store at which, in the old days, she had shopped for all her family.

The store is one of those that becomes a kind of habit with a family, so that mothers pass on to daughters the names of favoured suppliers and expect would-be sons-in-law to open accounts there.

A HABIT

ON this occasion, Mabel came to shop-gaze rather than to shop, to take pleasure at second-hand in looking at things displayed for people with money to buy.

Mabel had not much more money than her fare from the suburbs, for since her husband died, 10 years ago, her only income has been a £2 widow's pension, and most of that she has given to her daughter, with whom she lives.

Not that Mabel grumbles. She belongs to a generation taught to count its blessings and is grateful for her home and the love that surrounds her.

SOMETHING GAY

BUT the store's displays were tempting, and at one counter Mabel succumbed to temptation. She stole a gay, scarlet notecase—just the thing to brighten a faded handbag whose chief property was that it was usually rather empty.

At Bow Street, Mabel pleaded guilty to the theft, and said: "I don't know what came over me. I was just walking round the store, which I knew so well years ago, and then..."

"Is your daughter here?" asked Sir Laurence Dunn.

"No, I didn't let her come, because she's not well, and want her to get better," Mabel said.

"Well, you mustn't do this again," said Sir Laurence "for if you do it could be very serious, in spite of your age."

"Oh no, I wouldn't," said Mabel. She was discharged conditionally, and she hustled away, into the gay and pretty springtime.

China Braces For Year's Calamities

Paris, May 12.

China's Ministry of the Interior has issued a nation-wide directive warning the people of destruction from "possible natural calamities" occurring this year, Radio Peking reported today.

Quoting forecasts made by Peking's Central Meteorological Station, the Ministry pointed out the unusual abundance of rainfall in many parts of the country and if the situation continued, flood might occur in the forthcoming months.

The directive also warned people in typhoon areas along the coastal areas of East and South China to be prepared to cope with typhoons in the summer.

Last year one of the most devastating typhoons in 50 years, "Typhoon Wanda," struck East China and particularly Shanghai with full fury, causing widespread damage.
